

Hang-gliding attracts many from Canada & U.S.

Leisure time activities characterize vacation fun in the Qu'Appelle Valley.

And in the last several years there's been a new recreation pursuit that's literally taken off, hang-gliding.

Long known for its colorful tapestry of lakes, beautiful prairie wildflowers and abundant wildlife, the Qu'Appelle has become a mecca for those who thrill in taking to the air.

In fact the Qu'Appelle Valley is recognized as providing not only the best hang-gliding conditions in Saskatchewan but many say it is the best spot between Ontario and the Rockies.

That's the reason the Qu'Appelle attracts the sport's enthusiasts from across Canada and the United States.

The unique land form that makes the valley such an appealing place is the reason for its suitability for hang-gliding.

An abundance of steep hill-faces provide ideal launch areas.

There's a 120-metre drop from the hills and the air currents heated on the Valley floor spiral upward allowing the gliders to stay aloft for long periods of time.

As one glides out over the valley, the beautiful landscape with the lakes and river below, and shimmering fields of golden wheat and grass provide a tranquil and peaceful - yet very exciting - break from the work-a-day world.

Cowessess First Nation a snowmobilers dream

You can't beat the winter fun that's available in the beautiful Qu'Appelle Valley if you're a snowmobiling fan. And the Cowessess First Nation region offers some of the most scenic snowmobiling adventures you can have in Saskatchewan.

We have completed our trails in the vast Qu'Appelle system, with coulees so deep the sun barely shines in them. We're regularly grooming trails and have over 200 kilometres of trails and more yet to come, being groomed by Broadview Snowbusters. These are the only trails that connect Saskatchewan's north trail system and its south trail system.

We have fuel to offer at Marieval Mall, food at the mall and have now opened the golf course for food and snowmobile gatherings.

Some moose, deer, elk and bear are in the area and the odd cougar can be seen.

Trails overlook the valley and golf course. The trails will be year-round trails being used for quads, walking and hiking in the summer months. So put us on the map for next year's snowmobiling.
